

Tuesday 20th May 2014

WALT: write a narrative

good starter!

1 week later...

After enjoying himself playing outside, the robot returned back to the factory.

it's a place!

Pushing the creaking gates of the factory, the robot stepped inside. The dark, sinister factory was as cold as the South-Pole. The robot was chattering ever so loudly you could hear him from a mile away. It was as quiet as an abandoned church. But then suddenly the gates of the factory started to close. The robot ran and tried to pull the bars but it was locked. There was no way out. He could hear screams and voices telling him not to go any further or death will come. He could smell petrol filling the air. He knew he shouldn't have come to the factory.

The robot carried on walking making sure nobody was watching him. EEEK! What was that? The robot rapidly turned around. Phew. It was only a rat. Then the robot saw thousands of rats coming from no where. There was something fishy about this place thought the robot. Then he turned back round again. In one room there were wax people that looked alive. The robot just carried on tip-toeing.

But meanwhile...

As the robot was tip-toeing along, the wax peoples eyelids were opening gradually. Then one by one their legs started to move and now they were pretty much alive! The wimpy robot then went into the second room. In that room was nothing but smells of petrol.

BBBBUUZZZ! Suddenly the lights turned on by themselves itself. The robot was shaking like mad.

Year 5
Type of writing: story
Pupil	Objective	Teacher
Some	USE I S P A C E D	Some
✓	I have created tension	✓
✓	I have used ... ..	✓
✓	I have read it through	✓
✓	I have used ? ! ' ( )	✓
✓	I have used 10 adjectives	✓
✓	I have used my target	✓
What could I do to improve next time? USE MORE Adverbs I agree - an adverb starter would work well.

HTA A great piece of writing Danish. You used lots of devices to create tension.

sp. tried x3: tried tried tried turned x3: turned turned turned